CO – CHAOS MAKERS

ONCE UPON A TIME, a doctor, a lawyer and a politician were debating among themselves upon whose was the oldest profession; the doctor maintained that his was, since the creation of Eve from Adam's rib was a surgical operation: the lawyer said, "No, first, order was made out of chaos which was a legal performance; whereupon, the politician looking coyly triumphant, said "But who made the chaos?"

This hirsute and not especially funny joke, having gone the rounds for decades, is now rendered even more boringly irrelevant since it has become impossible wholly to conceal the evidence that all these professions have not only never produced creators, in any sense, but have lately become glaringly infamous for an outcrop of chaos-makers remarkably successful and seemingly irremovable from their strategically advantageous positions, yet there are no demands for Heracles to come and cleanse the Augean stable.

How can this be? When even the once impenetrable curtain that hangs between the public and the Fourth Estate is now sufficiently tattered for even the natives who see or listen to headlines only must surely be left with some, if only fleeting, qualms about the sovereign state of the nation which they still consider their own by right of blood? It appears that such nonchalance in the face of disaster is maintained because only glimpses of different areas of destruction are exhibited, and those, on different occasions through different media. The impact is diffused. We do not need Heracles to clear one loose box. So let us have a look at the whole establishment with a view to damning (sending to Hell or at least to Coventry) the whole Establishment, national and international which conspires to compass our annihilation.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

Summer has come. What was the harvest of spring?

On the farmers; Is it sufficiently well known that many of them exposed to pesticides such as OP's have become very ill and suffered from a whole range of diseases of which some of them have died. The US journal, Neurology of 1993, found "Evidence of an association between pesticide exposure, most prominently to insecticide products, and Parkinson's disease..." Who is doing what about that? What one gathers from the media is that the medical profession is more often euphorically concerned with experiments on parts of aborted babies in the search for "eternal" life and enhancing cosmetics to go with it; changing the sex of egoistical introverts dissatisfied with their own; and prolonging the muted existence of terminally injured victims of accident or malice. Those are the occasionally newsworthy doctors always favourably reported; the Hippocratic oath abiders have little if any news worthiness in our progressive society.

So that is the "health" scene. No remedial action there. What of the industrial set-up — or down? Not a retrospective tear shed over: no coal, no cotton, no wool, no fish and certainly no cattle except for the organic farmers — God bless them and preserve them. Still the catalogue goes on: no truck, no motor car, no aircraft, nor ship building industries — and we would be interested to know the well — or ill-fare of the makers of Nottingham and Honiton lace; Northampton shoes, gloves etc. The Japanese wartime building of the Burma railway with English and Empire prisoner labour seems to have inured us to working for strange suns instead of producing "heart of oak" for "jolly Jack Tars" ourselves.

2nd May, 1996. Sunday Telegraph page 5.

Quote: "RAF's Royal Squadron — has been forced by defence cuts to hire second-hand French civilian helicopters... To fill a gap caused by withdrawal of two ageing British Gazelles". The RAF was told by Downing Street that the cost of replacing them was prohibitive, so the taxpayers must foot the bill for two second hand, inferior aircraft that carry fewer passengers and are less well equipped to fly in bad weather.

ALSO NO AIRFORCE

2nd April, 1996. Daily Telegraph: "RAF STAFF CRISIS MAY HALT ROUTINE NATO CHECKS"

Yes we would be well out of NATO but:

"Annual inspections, where personnel at RAF stations take part in formal parades, are to be scrapped".

"Common core skills training is to be suspended, including general service training and trade management training. Royal Tournament and International Air Tattoo at Fairford are to be scaled down and RAF involvement reduced to a 'sensible minimum'".

THAT SEEMED TO SIGNAL THAT THE "FORCE" IS REMOVED FROM ROYAL AIR.

As for civil aviation — our concern with that industry ended with the "E" on Concorde so blithely announced by the contemporary stooges of what is euphemistically termed the Ministry of Civil Aviation.

What of merchant shipping? Why, Germany, Japan or possibly cloud-cuckoo land will supply our needs, should our masters express any. Taxpayers couldn't be less concerned with the origin of the goods their interest-bearing debts are continually increased to pay for; or if they do care, they are too cowed to say so loud enough to be heard in a back slum let alone Whitehall. Because:

On 23rd April, St George's Day, a Daily Mail headline proclaimed:

"TO BE ENGLISH IN ENGLAND TODAY IS ALMOST A CRIMINAL OFFENCE"

Over Richard Littlejohn's query:

"Why is England now a nation that dare not speak its name?"

WELL; WHY? Shameful as it is; two days before, The Daily Telegraph on an inside page, had provided what seems to be the answer.

"PC told to quit over race remark in pub"

"A police officer has been asked to resign after allegations that he was overheard making offensive racist remarks," writes AJ McIlroy.

"A member of the public claimed that Pc Dale Holden made the alleged comments while he was drinking in a pub in Loughborough, Leicestershire, and reported the officer to his superiors.

A disciplinary hearing, chaired by Keith Povey, Chief Constable of the force, was held last week and the officer who was based at Loughborough police station, was asked to resign. A spokesman for Leicestershire police said yesterday:

'A complaint was made regarding remarks of a racial nature by an off-duty police officer.'

'Complaints such as this are taken very seriously and fully investigated.'

'Leicestershire Constabulary is proud of its reputation for policing a multicultural community with sensitivity and empathy.'

A Police Federation spokesman said PC Hale was planning to appeal."

End of Item.

So how did we come to this sorry pass? The above quote makes it self-evident that before the asset-strippers, came the race mixers. People who find that they cannot call their souls their own are hardly likely to worry about the fate of the family estate they are no longer heirs to or who will become the Lord of the Manor.

Browning might well have had second thoughts about: "Oh, to be in England now that spring is there!" If he had been vouchsafed a preview of the state of the nation in April, 1996.

April 26th The Leader Times Series reported:

"Muslims across Pendle will be celebrating Eidul-Adha this weekend". That notice appeared over a photograph in which, among fifty pupils we could not identify more than a dozen who might have been English.

The caption read:

"All the pupils took part in the special celebratory performance. They came from Edge Hill High, St Pauls CE and Walverden County Primary School."

April 16th, 1996 in The Citizen we had a photograph of one Geetha Sidhu, flanked by Mr Heathcote Amory MP, "Treasury Supremo" and the Blackburn Conservative club chairman:

Quote: "Paymaster General, David Heathcote Amory MP,... popped into Blackburn conservative Club and told the local Tory faithful: 'Geetha Sidhu is the woman for the job'. 'The job' being Conservative MP for Blackburn. His statement was heavily endorsed by Wasim Ahmed-Khan; 'she understands our culture and speaks our language... All Asians are essentially Tories and I think Miss Sidhu represents all aspects of our community...'"

You do realise this is Blackburn, Lancashire, England, don't you?

May 21st, 1996. The Evening Telegraph, Peterborough, Northampton, England, featured a quarter page, coloured photograph of: "Labour's Mohammed Choudary... Peterborough's first Asian mayor"

Quote: "During the year he will be raising money for his mayor's charities, one of which will be "The children's charity UNICEF - which is celebrating its 50th anniversary."

Just to keep it all in perspective... Two further May news items from Peterborough:

28th May, 1996. From Paul Newton: "Will our generation have the distinction of being the first to break with the tradition of clergy associated with Peterborough in defending the Christian faith, even at the cost of their lives and turn the Christianity symbolised by the cathedral into 'Just another belief?'" He was referring to the proposed multi-faith ceremony to inaugurate the new mayor." That appeared under the sub-headline: "Keep Cathedral for Christians."

And: same month: "GANG OF 40 BEAT BOY"

Quote: "an epileptic schoolboy was taken to hospital after he was attacked with bolts by a gang of 40 Asian youths after a chase through a city estate... The attack is the latest in a spate of incidents in the city involving Asians hitting out at white youths... The city's first Asian mayor said: 'It is not a good thing for community relations... We have already set up a group from three local mosques' and two other members of the community, (Not specified), which is working towards overcoming this problem.' It is to be hoped he remembers that the town planners had already (reported in Daily Mail, May 7th) urged that ethnic minorities should get special rights to "build mosques", open takeaways or extend their homes. "The Royal Town Planning Institute intends to send guidance to all council planning departments to 'educate' them in the special needs of ethnic minorities."

We wonder how the "first Muslim mayor" of Peterborough is going to 'overcome' that problem

HOW TO MAKE FRIENDS AND INFLUENCE PEOPLE

As a postscript. Here is a reminder of the jolly exchanges enjoyed by the home and away councillors of the "twinning" cities and towns scattered around the countryside - the "aways" of which most of us have never heard of and the expenses of which Euro jaunts never seem to be very prominently displayed in local council accounts. We were reminded of these "neighbourly" Euro excursions by another photograph, or two rather, one of Herr Stumpf from Immenstadt in Bavaria, the other of the Bavarian town. The caption under them is:

"BEEF WELLINGTON TOO MUCH FOR GERMANS TO SWALLOW"

It seems that a party of 19 adults and 12 children due to make an official visit from Immenstadt to stay with families in Wellington have asked their hosts to take beef of the menu and serve chicken, turkey and fish during their week long stay. The request was passed on to the hosts by the secretary of Wellington Twinning Association who "quite understood their worries" and assured them there would be no beef served and even though there'll be no beef".

Tim Potter who runs a butchcher's shop in Fore Street, Wellington, said: "There is no problem with British beef - our sales are booming."

Clive Weller, a Wellington town centre butcher said:

"I take a pretty dim view of it and don't go a lot on the Germans' decision". Kit Chapman, an hotelier said; "it's bloody rude of the Germans but the way Wellington reacted smacks of 1939 appeasement. How dare they behave in such an ungracious way?"

A Gloucestershire farmer, Ben Pullen called for Germany to be banned from the Euro 96 soccer tournament.

Sounds like a game called consequences from our childhood. The consequence was they were all sent to bed without any supper.

And the world said, "I didn't know they were coming so I baked a steak."

MAN WITHOUT ENEMIES

You have no enemies you say?

Alas, my friend, the boast is poor.

He who has mingled in the fray

Of duty, that the brave endure,

Must have made foes. If you have none,

Small is the work that you have done.

You've hit no traitor on the hip,

You've dashed no cup from perjured lip,

You've never turned the wrong to right,

You've been a coward in the fight.

Charles Mackay, British poet (1814-1889)

ABSENTEE HOME-MAKERS CREATE BALANCE IN THE WORKPLACE

That is the opinion advocated by one who in the interests of consistency should surely be styled "Ms Howe", Chairperson of Opportunity 2000, rather than Lady Howe of Aberavon, Chairman etc. Mrs Myra Hannah's letter to the editor of The Daily Telegraph putting an opposite opinion was seemingly consigned to the editorial waste paper basket as the expression of obstinate resistance of a persistent enemy of the passionate progress of womankind from the trees to the top of the somewhat leafless economic success tree.

Truth demands that Mrs Hannah's views should be published in the public interest, so here they are.

Reference your letter in the Telegraph today.

Whatever the merits of equal opportunity in work, I am quite certain, and it must be obvious to every one of any intelligence, that the breakdown in family life, to the positive detriment of the home and the children, is caused by "working mothers" who are also replacing men in the workforce. These are mothers who have to work since there are certain jobs which have always been done by women, what is quite mystifying is the almost aggressive replacement of the males in jobs, which were hitherto exclusively done by them, and in which they are now the first to be made redundant. Particularly, I have in mind the Bank's. The preponderance of women nowadays in Bank posts has led to a noticeable decline in efficiency, service and customer relations. Because of the flexi working hours permitted them, because of pregnancy leave etc., it is, at times, quite impossible to have a continuity in business procedures, often times very important business, through the bank at all, because the lady clerk to whom instructions were given yesterday, is not in today or not until the afternoon, and no one else knows anything about the matter at issue, a customer makes a substantial loss on a business transaction. This situation did not obtain before all this equal opportunity was imposed.

It does seem to one that the object of the equal opportunities industry is to emasculate the male, particularly the indigenous British male, and in this it is succeeding.

Whether it be the human animal, bird or insect male of the species, the protection of and provision for the female and the young have always been the role of the male. So it had continued until a few decades ago in the case of human beings.

FAMILY LIFE

Also until a few decades ago, in the main, family life was secure and sound. Indeed, it was not until the advent of the career working mother that family life began to crumble, now it has reached catastrophic proportions, with its concomitant woes. For that, I believe you and the equal opportunities apparatus are almost totally to blame.

I do not suppose you or the absurd feminists who promote this unnatural trend have ever thought of its consequences or indeed, care. In bringing married women into the workforce, sometimes (oftentimes) imposing on them the obligation to support the family because their husbands are involuntarily unemployed, made redundant, and thus deprived of self respect as well as occupation. (It is said; every married woman's job is man's lost job!) these women have insuperable burdens imposed upon them; they are expected to do the impossible.

The impossible is - additional to their jobs where employers expect, and are entitled to, loyalty and application, the running of a home and the bearing and upbringing of children. In point of fact, no human being can do two full time jobs, and that is what these mothers are expected to do. It is impossible, something must give. Society, the nation and, indeed, paramount, their own interests require staple family life; secure, happy and well-balanced children. That is where we have fallen down. Indeed, it does seem, for whatever reason or conspiracy, there is a concerted attack on family life and on the youth and so, the future of our nation. Do you subscribe to that attack?

Consider the day in day out existence of a working mother. She rises in the morning, perhaps after disturbed sleep or none at all, the day's toil begins: children to wash, dress, placate, feed and deliver to schools, crèches or child minders: she shops at lunch break or after work. She has the ills, disturbances and emotional anxieties of unsettled children on her mind whilst she battles with a job. She collects the children, often very fractious children, she has to placate them. At home, she has to wash, iron and mend. She has to cook (mostly "fast-junk" which, alas, is all she has time for). And cope with the children before bathing them and putting them to bed. How can any human being be expected to cope with that sort of life? That is what you and your equal opportunities inflict on the nation's mothers and on their husbands and children.

Have you ever considered the disruption of the children's lives? Do you not realise that the modern increase in child insecurity, crime and drug consumption arise from mothers being at work and this not in their natural surroundings.

ON THE SCRAP HEAP

HOME. Have you not considered that the child burglar, joy rider, basher of old ladies, of young children, of its peers etc., is also the insecure, out of control victim of your equal opportunities fiasco? In your anti-male campaign, for whatever reason, you are damaging marriage, home life, women and children yet you are too arrogant to see and admit it.

Sadly you are listened to in this age of the cult of man. It is blatantly obvious that some interest seeks the destruction of our Race and our youth, of our children (the future of our nation). If that were not so, long ago it would have been admitted (and averted) that the equal opportunity experiment is both a disaster and a failure.

Do you still not realise the harm you have done and continue to do?

Greed and corruption have destroyed great nations and societies before. It remains to be seen when you and your ilk, pursuing your anti-male campaign, will bring down this nation. Here we have married women in high offices whose jobs could be done as well or better by men of equal qualifications, thereby making vacancies for other males, now made redundant and on the dole.

Do not overlook the numbers of able, highly qualified and experienced men thrown on the scrap heap because of married women in the work force. Many of these married women, such as yourself, are more than adequately provided for by prosperous spouses. These so called redundant men have a great deal to contribute to the nation, yet, in many cases, incompetents and misfits are employed in their stead, whilst their neglected homes and children contribute to the dust and damage in the society they should enhance.

Unfortunately, as yet, there is no one or organisation available to combat the destruction you and your equal opportunities group are inflicting on the nation, on the British people and on British posterity.

Whilst there is serious unemployment and despair in this country, whilst school leavers foresee only the bleak future of unemployment, one job-income per couple in a household should be adequate; that specifically applies to greed at the top.

That is really what should concern the equal opportunity fraternity, surely? One might think you are sincere if you promoted the obvious importance of mothers' well being and of job and career prospects for the youth of our nation.

But you are not sincere, are you?

CANDOUR — PASS IT ON!

CUT AND THRUST — at home

Once upon a time it was believed that a young criminal sent to jail was in danger of becoming a hardened offender because of the company of his fellows. Nowadays, it appears that he may become a drug addict (drugs being readily available "inside") and also become infected with AIDS because of sexual activity. There are suggestions that the numbers of prison staff be reduced (to save money); as we are, apparently, going to build even more prisons in the future would it not be wise to have them run entirely by the inmates? After all, we seem to be halfway there already.

Jessie, a crippled and toothless dog, ruled by the courts to be a pit bull terrier, has been destroyed. A gang of youths has committed 228 offences between them; their leader has served less than a month behind bars for his offences and the police say that they are powerless to punish the youngsters. One solution would be to have the criminals re-mustered, so to speak, as pit bull terriers; they could then be dealt with suitably.

It is understood that the police have uncovered a plot by the IRA to mount a weapon launcher on a boat in the Thames and fire a bomb at the House of Parliament. The mind boggles at the thought of the annihilation of upwards of 600 MP's at one fell swoop. Mind you, the attempt must be undertaken at a particular time in order to achieve full effect. The Commons is usually far from full, especially on Friday afternoons, the only occasions for obtaining a clean sweep, when all are present, being The Opening of Parliament, Budget Day and any occasion when MP's wages and expenses are being debated. Perhaps it would not be necessary after all; when we are well into Europe there will be no need for Parliament; the rules will arrive from Brussels and be carried by Civil Servants, much as is the case at present. Parliament buildings, like other large edifices, could be sold to some oriental entrepreneur and the books (Hansard and the rest) to an American university.

A piece in The Daily Telegraph Weekend, April 13th, 1996, caught our jaundiced eye. Under the heading; "Toy Town Gone Mad", we read; "... And what sort of message is conveyed by a neglected black doll booted around in the bottom of the toy box? As toy manufacturers know to their cost, black versions of Barbie, Sindy and Action Man are not generally popular. 'I have collected toys for 40 years', says Francis Baird, author of Action Man 1966-1984, 'and in my experience black children don't want to buy black dolls'". And yet, The Childrens Act has increased the ability of local authorities to de-register groups that they feel are not observing correct practices as far as religious teaching and ethnocentric awareness are concerned. The toy box had better be politically correct — or else!

Town planners are urging councils to relax planning regulations on behalf of the ethnic minorities, the new policy has been issued by the Royal Town Planning Institute — the town planners' professional body. 'For a large number of ethnic minorities hot food takeaways are important job providers' thus late night noise, litter and smell should not be an issue we suppose. Two storey extensions on terrace-houses are usually refused, but not for our dusky brethren, especially if they are poor dusky brethren, as this will save them from cramped conditions. (How do people on low income afford building extensions? Or should we say attract high interest?). The policy also considers the building of mosques, women's refuges, children's classes, burial facilities and slaughterhouses.

A 'B'BC news item stated that 20% of blacks and 40% of Asians have experienced racial violence. No one mentioned whites experiencing any racial violence. How about your next door neighbour?

Labour, if in power, would accept a ruling from the European Court of Human Rights to outlaw the ban on homosexuals in the armed forces. Attention! — slope handbags.

Marion Barry, the former black power militant, is Mayor of Washington. He has served a stint in jail for drug offences and, under his rule, the city is in a complete mess, threatened with bankruptcy in spite of one of the highest tax rates in the nation; crime is rampant. However, Mr Barry said, truthfully enough, "People know my good points and I think they have come to the conclusion that I'm not perfect, but I'm perfect for Washington". One must agree.

The trial of a Viennese schoolteacher, accused of spreading Nazi propaganda, was interrupted when it turned out that the judge shared his political views. An American neo-Nazi leader has gone on trial in Hamburg, charged with sending extremist propaganda to Germany. Perhaps the best thing would be to introduce a law which would cover any form of non PC opinion (spoken, written, broadcast or even thought). This would simplify the administration of justice.

The Jewish community in Hungary was nearly wiped out in the Holocaust; after the war the survivors either emigrated or hid their roots. However, there has been a revival since then; a 3 million pound school has 600 Jewish children, the Central European University offers studies in east European Jewish history, three kosher restaurants cater for orthodox Jews and three Jewish schools offer secular and religious education. There are 80,000 Jews in Hungary today, and there may be many more who have lost touch with the community (according to Rabbi Frohlich). Either they breed at a very high rate or — what?

There are civil wars going on in Angola, Djibouti, Sierra Leone and Sudan; unrest in Mauritania, Mali, Niger and Zaire, not to mention Nigeria and Cameroon. Hutus and Tutsis are killing each other in Burundi and Rwanda; Indonesia has ruthlessly repressed Papua New Guinea. The subcontinent of India has seen several wars and violence between religious groups; Burma is ruled by a military dictatorship; all this bloodshed is unfortunate, no doubt, but at least the survivors have been saved from the colonial oppression of Imperial rule when most of them had no votes.

THE LAST REVENGE?

Or as the Cook Said of Some Fellow Domestic's Behaviour, "It's All of a Piece!"

Royal or commoner - whoever resolves to remove a threat to his nation's sovereignty by banishing usurers and/or usurpers from the infested realm will find himself a target for the sniping historians for generations to come.

In the first case, nothing succeeds like success in bringing historical condemnation on the victor; in the second case it is failure that damns the heroic defender; and, of course, returns to patrimony the ever surviving usurious moneylenders.

The prime examples of these varying results are: Edward I and Richard III, both Plantagenets- Richard the last of the line.

Later generations of the Jewish usurers who were sent packing in 1290 by Edward I, returned with the Tudors to develop a now familiar "holocaust" theme, the lasting effects of which were underlined some years ago by Charles, the present Prince of Wales, who, in a television interview expressed his distaste for his persecuting ancestor. So, he is evidently not persona grata in the royal forbears, thin though the blood line is.

Richard of Gloucester, true King of England, hacked to death on Bosworth Field, in 1485, because of the battlefield betrayal by the traitorous Lords, Stanley and Northumberland, is seemingly forever branded a double infanticide by the genius of Shakespeare, whose reputation one can be sure would have been sunk without trace if he had not complied with the obvious Tudor necessity.

Anyone who has read Josephine Tey's Daughter of Time or studied the evidence made available by founders and members of the Richard III Society must have been presented with sufficient evidence to reverse the Tudor "cover-up" essential to the establishment of the usurping "Tudor line". The centuries of sob-stuff about "the little princes in the Tower" has as much truth in it as "the gas chambers of Auschwitz stuffed with six million jews". When Richard Duke of Gloucester, who had been named, in his brother's last Will and Testament as Lord Protector of the Realm, during the minority of the Edward, Prince of Wales, came from his home, Middleham Castle, to London to arrange for Edward's coronation, he was met on the way by the Queen Dowager's Woodville brothers accompanying the two princes having long constituted themselves their guardians and mentors, which did not make for rapport between the brainwashed Prince and his conscientious guardian. Before the coronation could take place amidst all the intrigues and plots of the Woodville tribe, Richard was confronted with the devastating news that his beloved brother the "Sun in Splendour" (Edward) had never been legally married to Elizabeth Woodville because he had previously been clandestinely betrothed (married) to one Eleanor Butler, therefore, both his sons were bastards; the witness, Bishop Stillington, presumably hoped that he need not be the one to reveal the deception; that Edward himself would resolve it somehow or recover from his infatuation. The lustful King, however, seemed besotted with Elizabeth Woodville and remained so all his life. Her ambitious family had been determined "to capture the king", so to speak, and Elizabeth was the willing bait. Perhaps the rumoured witchcraft of her mother, the Duchess of Bedford, was responsible for Edward's determination to possess the "forbidden fruit" at any price, however it was, the charming, profligate king went through a form of marriage that made him a willing prisoner of the Woodvilles for all his life.

Everyone at Court loathed the Woodvilles especially Richard of Gloucester, Edward's "little brother" who loved him and abhorred the effect of the Woodvilles' way on his splendid brother. The bombshell of Bishop Stillington's revelation that stunned Richard almost to despair, animated every secret seeker after supreme power to intrigue to win it. Richard had been such a good and popular Governor of the North that he was accepted as King with enthusiasm by the people who rejoiced not to have a minor as monarch subservient to the hated Woodvilles. Richard was crowned and as he had promised did justly in his royal Office. Although it was impossible for bastards to inherit entailed estates, let alone kingdoms, Edward's illegitimate sons lived as young lords and did not disappear from public eye until the threat of invasion by the Tudor usurper became immanent, then Richard sent them for safety to Barnard Castle and subsequently across the sea to his sister-in-law, the Duchess of Burgundy. While Richard lived, there was no accusation or even rumour of infanticide. Only the victorious Tudor's triumph, the King's death in the Bosworth battle, and the Shakespearian fiction turned Richard's reputation from that of a just governor and popular monarch to that of a monster of depravity who murdered his favourite brother's sons to steal their inheritance..... Cui bono?

At the end of the Tudor "dynasty" England was back in the banks of the jews; the unity of Christendom was shattered; the English Catholics had been martyred or starved off their lands, and the way to the national shambles was ready and waiting to be taken by the next usurper, who was:- the Protestant "poofster", the Prince of Orange Nassau.....Q.E.D.

To return to Edward Plantagenet and predictable Scottish condemnation of the English "thief" of the Stone of Scone, that 400lbs of controversial rock that is venerated by the Scots as their Stone of Destiny, which according to Celtic legend "served Jacob as a pillow" whilst he dreamed of angels. Be that as it may, according to the Daily Telegraph of 4th July: "The last Scots King to be crowned on it was John de Balliol in 1292, regarded by historians as an "English puppet", and thereby hangs a tale which lends an air of dubiety to the oft repeated story of the "infamous invader" Edward Plantagenet. It was all about Edward's conviction that there would be no peace except in a United Kingdom of England, Wales and Scotland with the complication of the disputed Scottish royal succession, because according to, The Plantagenets, by John Harvey, on the death of Alexander III in 1286, his grand daughter, Margaret of Norway, was the only direct heir to the throne of Scotland; it was intended that a personal union between England and Scotland should be brought about by her marriage to Edward's only son, Edward of Carnarvon, afterwards Edward II. But Margaret died and the next heirs to Scotland were descendants of three daughters of David, great uncle of Alexander. By primo geniture the heritage lay with the line of the eldest daughter, whose grandson John Balliol was the first of three claimants. Robert Bruce, son of the second daughter, based his claim on the fact that he was one generation nearer in the parent tree than his rival; the third claimant, John Hastings, Lord Abergavany, claimed that the Kingdom should be divided by the Law of Land Inheritance between the lines of the three claimants, he himself being grandson of the youngest. No party seriously accepted Hasting's claim; it was held that a Kingdom was an impartible inheritance. All three claimants were persuaded by the Scottish regents to submit their claims to Edward's arbitration; after assembly of learned lawyers and clerks, and collection of histories and chronicles to decide precedent, Edward, at Norham, demanded that all partners should acknowledge his historic claim to be suzerain overlord of Scotland; after a month's delay spent in scrutinizing the chronicles, this was agreed to, and all the Scottish barons swore fealty to Edward. A special court consisting of eighty Scots, forty appointed by Balliol and forty by Bruce, and twenty four Englishmen chosen by Edward, sat for nearly eighteen months and scrutinized every point. The final decision on point of law was in favour of Balliol, who was immediately put in possession of his kingdom. The whole of the subsequent misery and bloodshed in the wars between England and Scotland lies at the door of those rebellious Scots who neither adhered to their king, nor to their oaths of fealty to their supreme overlord, Edward.

Richard III

The case of Wallace is different; he was not a baron, but an outlawed guerilla leader, skilled and daring, but ruthless in his conduct. He adhered to no rules of chivalry, but waged total war against man, woman and child. It was cold blooded murder and incendiarism that led him to the scaffold after his capture*. Had his offences been merely political he would have found the same mercy that Edward's other opponents never sought in vain; but Wallace was not the romantic hero of later legend; he was a leader of well organised criminals in an assault upon society. For three hundred years the Borders suffered cruelly for this one man's misdeeds, and it is strange that the Scots who were the greater sufferers, should have long idolized their destroyer.

*No H-blocks for him! Though Belloc says, to execute a prisoner of war was against the laws of chivalry. But we know Wallace did not abide by them.

How's This For a Modern Repeat of the Renaissance Publishing Stakes?

No sooner had we completed the tale of the historical, and in one case actual, doom meted out to our two Plantagenet Kings, Edward I and Richard III, than our further research into modern equivalents (other than Mr Purdey, organic farmer, and his colleagues in their fight to save needlessly doomed cattle) brought to light startling evidence that centuries may pass but the usurers power and punishments remain the same... physical murder is never enough-- character must be assassinated as well...

We looked in the latest edition of Chambers Biographical Dictionary to check the date of Huey Long's death, and thus came upon the write-up-- or rather down-- on his younger brother, who was also for not just one-- but for several terms, governor of Louisiana: his name was Earl Kemp Long.

Here are the relevant entries which speak for themselves:

Quote; "Long (2) Earl Kemp (1895-1960), brother of Huey Pierce, continued his brother's methods of corrupt administration *coupled with sound social legislation as lieutenant-governor (1936-40, 1948-52, 1956-60) of Louisiana. Suffering from paranoiac schizophrenia, he was at his wife's request placed in a mental hospital in May, 1959 and forcibly detained there with police help, until, using his powers as governor, he dismissed the mental hospitals (sic) superintendent and appointed politically favourable medical officers."

"See Life by A.J. Liebling (1962)" End of Quote.

STANDS ENGLAND WHERE SHE DID ?

"Alas Poor Country", it is to be feared that she does.

Amidst all the soccer and tennis euphoria, with "Football Coming Home" and a British tennis player reaching the "last sixteen" at Wimbledon '96 for the first time in twenty years or so, with St. George and Union banners abounding over red and white cheering faces, we are still a people immersed in the "circus" side of life to the intended detriment of any conception of all-out, overall war on the debt-ridden destruction threatening us in every department of society. All, but the faithful volunteer companies of stubborn patriots who refuse to compromise with evil, are seemingly satisfied-except for occasional mutterings- to keep their traditional roles of "good losers".

The English, it appears, or those who survived the carnage of two World-massacres and satellite conflicts have succumbed to a near-fatal inertia, prisoned in the manacles locked on by that monstrous Global Power symbolised for us by "the National Debt" enshrined in the so-called Bank of England; that alien fungus that since 1694 has defaced the once fertile soil in the garden of England, and has been burgeoning over it ever since, whilst the same power has usurped Regal and vice-Regal powers which if still sovereign, might have swept away the insidious growth that stifles every native enterprise and poisons the very soil and atmosphere in which the English genes and genius were used to thrive and prosper.

"POLITICIANS ARE PAWNS"

Was the headline given by the Lancashire Evening Telegraph on June 12th, this year of dis-grace, 1996, over the forthright letter of that indefatigable warrior, Mrs Sylvia Noble, in which she says: "If our politicians were not pawns in the hands of International Finance, they would confiscate its stranglehold over our nation's affairs, cancel the National Debt and release interest and debt-free money to finance industry and public spending such as the N.H.S."*1

Nothing has changed from 17th August, 1956, when Candour's (A.K. Chesterton's) remarks on the subject were headed, "OUR PUNY PARTY REBELS". Quote: "One of the most degrading aspects of our present Party system is the regularity with which any Member of Parliament who has summoned the slight amount of courage needed to attack some aspect of his party's policy can be relied upon, within a little while, to make a public appeal for uncritical general support for that party," (Remember the Common Market, Euro, Federal Europe, Euro-Currency and, above all "Suez" rebels?) and who, if they remain in their party of whatever variety, will emulate their predecessors and respond obediently to the Whip by "running out" before the last fence.

The only things politicians seem to be 'above' are the law and suspicion.

On the 22nd June 1996, the Daily Mail reported that the Court of Appeal has ruled that the Social Security Secretary, Peter Lilley, "acted unlawfully in withdrawing benefits from most 'asylum-seekers'" - "because it was a breach of Human Rights." No measured assesment of a fine point of law issued from the Bench but the kind of partisan propagandda usually associated with party politicians- "A judge intervening in a matter of political controversy, regardless of the reality behind the belated (Lilley) regulations which is that for years the cost to taxpayers of indiscriminate benefits to asylum-seekers are now in the order of 200 million pounds a year, whilst the majority of applicants are bogus". However, the Lord Chief Justice, Simon Brown, said: "The new rules would leave some asylum-seekers so destitute that to my mind no civilised nation can tolerate it." (Our italics). Well, well, one supposed that judges were there to administer the law not to change it. So even if the politicians do some of their duty, the Judges' can be relied upon to make sure that the power usurpers still have their way. It will be interesting to see how Mr Lilley fares should he persist and appeal to the emasculated (politically speaking) Lords, and where will he go from there? According to The Mail, back to the Commons to "bring forward fresh legislation drafted to be judge proof".

A VINTAGE YEAR

1956 was a vintage year for setting up the nation for execution by our "puny party hacks".

On the 31st August, 1956, Candour was reporting current attitudes on patriotism and treason in our schools. Quote: "When Mr Fenner Brockway asks the Minister of Education whether he thinks The League of Empire Loyalists' choice of *"The Case Against Scuttle"2 as a subject for its Annual Essay Competition, is a fit one for school children, he opens up a question that goes beyond any difference there may be between himself and the League. Mr Brockway maintains that the question shows a "political bias which should not be encouraged by any Education Authority" If he is right in his view, Loyalists may justly regard themselves as more sinned against than sinning and could cheerfully accept the Brockway Principle as being in practice a considerable gain to their cause even though they could never agree with the idea that to be loyal is to be guilty of political bias. If any of the many organisations of which Mr Brockway is a leading light were to launch an essay competition in which one subject was, "The Case Against Scuttle"-translated, of course, into the appropriate verbiage that comes readily to Mr Brockway's liberal lips- it is difficult to picture him applauding the refusal of an Education Authority to circulate details of the competition to the schools under its control. He and his associates would set up a tremendous howl but that would be nothing to the screams that would go up if national and municipal authorities were to withdraw the facilities for the indoctrination of our school children already enjoyed by a number of anti-patriotic organisations.....such bodies as UNESCO and the Council for Education in World Citizenship are helped in every conceivable way to pump their internationalistic and materialistic propaganda into children's minds!" The results are with us yet.

The 1956 contemporary M.P. for Petersfield, Hampshire, summed up the Tory view of the Suez "scuttle". Quote: "The effect upon our prestige of the Suez Affair, is of course a matter of opinion. I, for my part, feel that the success with which we have mobilized world opinion on our side has considerably enhanced our prestige. Prestige consists of approval as well as respect. I do not think that in the modern world, a country which incurs disapproval improves its prestige; nor is it in a position to exercise leadership."

A.K. Chesterton's comment was: "It would seem from the conduct of Conservative M.P.s in the House that the Peter Leghs are now the type most in demand- pale wraiths who prattle about "the success with which we have mobilized world opinion on our side," "I do not think that in the modern world a country that incurs disapproval improves its prestige."Has no-one told the poor boob that the "modern world" has staged two of the bloodiest wars in history, that the Red Empire extends from the Elbe to the China Sea and that the Dollar Emperors have put a girdle of military bases round the Earth?"-----Now extended to outer space in co-operation with the same Reds in the interests of intimidation of the "little victims" as gullible as ever.

Come 1957: The war went on unchecked- Candour and the League continued to sound the alarm.

18.1.57. "Threat to our Aircraft Industry" (Now: Almost non-existent)

25.1.57. "Call to the Christian Churches" (Now: Any Faith-No Faith, but never The Faith)

15.2.57. "Canada's March to Doom" (Has reached its goal)

26.4.57. "U.S. Backs European Union" (Now: "Progressed" to GATT/WTO/Treaties)

7/14.6.57. "Common Market Dangers" of Rome/Maastricht)

28.6.57. "They Met in Secret" (The Bilderbergers St. Simon's Island meeting- Guest list headed by Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands.)

We have signally failed to halt Establishment betrayal or the Jewish Money Power supremacy over Monarch, Lords, Commons or Church.

All our industries are either destroyed- sold to the power satellites or under siege.

Our country is laid waste or under foreign occupation:

We have not registered a lasting success in even the most local skirmish- it is as if we are helpless before the ravages of a boa constrictor and are destined to be swallowed whole when the beast comes hungry on our doorstep.

*1 No N.H.S., with no National Debt we could all afford to care for ourselves without N.H.S. bureaucracy.

*2 Eden's Suez Canal retreat.

This is NOT a Cry of Despair but A CALL to ACTION—NEW ACTION!

All our efforts must be turned to defence- not of farmers, fishers, coast-lines, countryside, forests, field, villages, market towns or any single issue on its own. Our country is being destroyed piecemeal so we must unite the pieces to defend it- the whole of it ! That is the only union to which we shall subscribe.

Every soul who cares for his native land must be active in her defence: Rouse himself; inspire his family; encourage his neighbours; spread the word. Remember, there is no war without wounds; the enemy will do his worst but our best will always be better than his worst because right will always prevail whenever it is practised. So let us return to the front, determined to trust in God. Fight the devil on the doorstep, help threatened neighbours; make the corner of England which is ours, however large or small, our prime concern and put not our trust in princes, prelates, and especially not politicians-----or lawyers !!

CRY GOD FOR ENGLAND AND St. GEORGE !

Candour Appeal

Belloc says: "He does not die, who can bequeathe some influence to the land he knows..."

Candour exists to do just that in the land we know - that is today almost overwhelmed with lies.

Some readers may find this difficult to believe but Candour has always run at a substantial loss throughout its 43 year history. Help us to live on, and expand, to spread combatative truth. God willing we shall not fail but our weapons may, unless you give us the means to keep them loaded! Candour relies on your generosity: you can bequeathe the means to keep them loaded! You can give and bequeathe the means to influence the land(our land) we know, which is in such dire need of it. When you are giving and/or bequeathing, (i.e. making your Wills!) - remember: if it is the truth you want, it is Candour you need!

NEW ENGLAND

by the late Lady Freeman M.B.E.

(to be sung to the tune of "Land of Hope and Glory")

Published originally in Candour 2nd September 1960.

Land of dope and Jewry,*
Mother of all Spivs,
Murderers extol thee:
"Who dies if England lives?"
Wider spreads and wider
The international net;
Let Blacks and Browns come pouring in,
We're not all coloured yet.

Land of thugs and perverts
Who've had it ne're so good
Living by the H.P.
On artificial food.
Wider still and wider
The wide boys hold their sway.
Tell it to the Horse Marines
That slick crime does not pay.

Land of Peace Pledge Marchers
Terrified of death
"Let Communism triumph
If we can still draw breath".
Wider still and wider
Franchise for the mobs;
Wigs and specs for aliens,
To help them snatch our jobs.

Land of bawling "Teddies",
Cacophony and chimes;
Traditions all derided
--We're busy chasing dimes.
Wider still and wider
The gangrene surely spreads;
License for pornography,
Liberty for Reds.

Land of windy leaders
Crying "Winds of Change".
Small wonder natives reason
That the lion has mange.
Wider still and wider
Moneylenders roam;
Finance Cypriot terrorists,
Drive Kenya settlers home !

Land of broken promises,
Land of dying faith,
Priests and politicians preach,
"Sovereignty spells death".
Wider still and wider
The record of our shame;
Must our glory vanish
Leaving but a name?

Quotes:- With almost NO comment.....

From the Daily Telegraph 5/7/96 and the weekly Accrington Observer. Just a minute sample of the daily betrayals and alien arrogance which year in and year out multiply where most they dis-satisfy.

"Tournament Dogs had their Day"

The Army and the RAF, traditional suppliers of the performing alsatians, spaniels and labradors; no longer have the man power for a display team.

Manning problems have also meant the end of the Guard of Honour for the Queen, when she arrives for one of the evening performances.

The Royal Navy, this year's lead Service for the twelve day show, does not have enough personnel to spare for the two weeks training needed for the 96-man guard which presents arms during the National Anthem.

P.S. The dogs it is said will be back for next year's Royal Tournament, but they will be civilians provided by the Essex Dog Display Team.

"History was Made"

Says the Accrington Observer when the North West's first Asian Mayor was inaugurated in Accrington Town Hall..."He has chosen his 29 year old daughter to take on the role of Mayoress."

"After the new Mayor had been sworn in, a passage from the Koran was read in Arabic and English by Mr Shaukat Ali, thanking Allah and asking him to bless the Mayor and all the Councillors.

Looking on proudly as Councillor Yousaf, 50, was invested with the chain of office were his wife Rukhsana Shaheen, who is a housewife, his sons, Nasir, 27, who works in his sub-post office in Burnley, and Tariq, 30, a civil engineer, and his daughter-in-law Yasim.

The toast to the new first citizens was proposed by Councillor Bill Goldsmith and seconded by Councillor Cliff Westell."

"Councillor Goldsmith said: 'The Asian community will feel proud that one of their sons has become Hyndburn's first citizen. He will carry out his duties in gentlemanly way and will bring dignity to the status of Mayor.'

He added: 'Shaheen is delighted...'

He told the couple: 'You will have some people throwing brickbats at you, but that doesn't matter, as you will have the majority of people behind you.'

Councillor Goldsmith was referring to some critical comments about the flying of the Pakistani flag outside the Town Hall."

Representatives of the "Pakistan Raj"- Sorry-High Commissioner....

Quote:- "After the formalities came the annual dinner which was attended by civic dignitaries and representatives from the Pakistan High Commission and Consulate in London and Manchester."

(Well, well, all most suitable in our multi-racial paradise....)

and as a Postscript:-

Daily Telegraph 6.7.96 reports:

"The Archbishop of Canterbury yesterday demanded that schools comply with the law requiring daily Christian worship as the first step towards restoring the nation's moral fibre."

No one will be surprised to learn that this "sparked off an angry row with the Educational Establishment" when the schools were accused of "failing in their duty to their pupils."

Well, good for the Archbishop !!

EMPIRE OR ECLIPSE

The following is the text of an address to the twelfth annual general meeting of the League of Empire Loyalists on 30th October, 1965, by Mr A.K. Chesterton, M.C., the League's founder and Policy Director and the then editor of Candour, which supported the League.

I PROPOSE first of all rapidly to review the trend of the times in which we live and then to relate to it the work of our own movement, making what was described elsewhere, and on a much less auspicious occasion, as an "agonising reappraisal", not indeed of our principles - these are immutable - but of problems affecting morale, our statement of objectives and the sheer necessity of our continued existence in the battle-line.

There appeared earlier this year a book called The British Political Fringe, in which the doubtful distinction of having a chapter devoted to it was accorded to the League of Empire Loyalists. Those of you who have read it will perhaps agree with me that it is a very dull and laboured book, remarkable only for the author's quite astonishing flair for inaccuracy. But one of the few things he does get right is his quoting me as saying that the modern world is a truly dreadful place. As he quotes the phrase with obvious scorn, the assumption must be that he finds the modern world a truly wonderful place, a demi-paradise if not the real thing.

As he is a young man of no great percipience or power of reflection he perhaps lacks standards of comparison which would enable him to understand what I had in mind. As he is an American he could no doubt add endlessly to the catalogue of T/V sets, refrigerators and washing-machines which Mr. Macmillan trotted out to prove to the British people that they "have never had it so good". As a young and myopic American, moreover, he would be quite unable to comprehend two of the greatest betrayals in history - the betrayal of Europe by the contrived admission into her heart-lands of the Mongol hordes marching behind the red flag of blood and human misery and the betrayal of Asia and Africa by the contrived destruction of the benevolent European empires.

The brash young author and the child of his imagination have served as an introduction to my theme: both can now be dismissed from mind.

First Real Shock

THE POSITION of the modern world would not be so bad if only one half of it were relapsing into savagery while the other half remained sane and civilised, because the sane half would recognise its duty to the other half and exert itself to redeem the savages and drive back the rapidly encroaching jungle. As things are, the situation is immeasurably more dangerous and intimidating. All the way from Leipzig to Shanghai stretches the vast prison in which every job is State-regulated, every movement State-controlled and every tongue conditioned to speak only what is acceptable to the State by fear of banishment, torture or death.

Africa north of the Zambesi has been handed over to Mau Mau or its local equivalents - indeed, worse than abandoned, handed over with ceremonial honours, including the Royal cachet. Asia has been flung back into its immemorial corruption and waves of mass hysteria. Thus the greater part of the modern world is either beaten into submission or seething with the evil passions which sway the minds of primitive and irresponsible peoples. Both sets of conditions bespeak a state of slavery in which the good, the simple, the unsuspecting are placed at the mercy of the cruel and ruthless. They create as nearly as can be imagined an earthly hell.

The part of the world which we like to regard as being free from all this devilry has come to be called "The West" and consists of the Americas, Western Europe, Australasia, Rhodesia, the Republic of South Africa and a few other small oases elsewhere. What of the West? Is it not strong? Is it not strong enough to challenge the strongest despotism? Is it not sane - sane enough to supply the therapy for those parts of the world which are mentally disturbed or retarded, the lands ravaged by madmen?

Only when we look to these possibilities and seek an answer to these questions do we receive our first shock. Only then do we find that the West is dominated by conspirators who drew up the blue-print for the gigantic inter-continental communist jail. Only then do we discover that entrenched vested interests in the West deliberately created disorder and chaos so as to subvert the Western European Empires and thereby facilitate their own takeover bids.

Easy Temptation

IT IS at this point of discovery that the temptation arises to assign to one particular force at work in the modern world the entire responsibility for all the disasters which have befallen it. The temptation should be resisted, because it is dishonest and leads to compulsive thinking. By all means throw light upon the machinations of the New York Money Power. By all means name Schiff, Warburg, Otto Kahn and the other partners of Kuhn, Loeb. By all means mention the name of Bernard Mannes Baruch. By all means expose as their stooges men like Woodrow Wilson, Roosevelt, Eisenhower and the rest. But I insist it is dishonest to do so unless one is also prepared to name their aiders and abettors in other lands, especially in our own and other British countries. If one speaks of President Johnson one should also speak of another stooge of the Money Power - Harold Wilson. If one speaks of Eisenhower one should also speak of Harold Macmillan. If one speaks of Bernard Baruch it is rank dishonesty to leave unspoken the name of his friend Winston Spencer Churchill.

Had it not been for the compliance of Churchill, especially in 1939, the barbarians from the East would not today be in possession of the European heart-lands. Had it not been for one rotten post-war British Government after another there would have been no surrender to Mau Mau or its equivalent, with the subsequent turning over to savagery of British Africa. Had it not been for rotten governments in Britain and elsewhere there would today have been no war and devastation in Vietnam, no turmoil in Indonesia, no civil war and all-prevalent corruption in the Indian subcontinent, no terrorism and murder campaigns in Iraq, Aden, Cyprus and other places too numerous to mention.

Nor should it be only Government that is impeached. What a terrible comment it is on the Western World, for instance, that our own House of Commons, supposed to be in the vanguard of democracy, contains not one solitary independent member, not one who has been elected in the teeth of the huge party machines, by constituents resistant to the brainwashing processes which concentrate attention on the political sham-fight! The refusal of the Churches to withstand the pressures of a so-called "public opinion" and to speak out against the betrayal of all the great values of Christendom and Western civilisation is another aspect of the rottenness, the sheer degeneracy, of the modern world. No less shameful is the role played by the universities, which should be turning out men able to distinguish between the real and the bogus, instead of producing, as happens all too often, half-men conditioned to be the oilers and custodians of the Gadarene slopes. Then there are the broadcasting systems and the mass-circulation newspapers, ceaselessly at work poisoning the public mind to ensure that, in every momentous choice, evil is mistaken for good and that the idealist shall nurture only those ideas which lead to the enslavement of mankind.

One Honest Criticism

THERE HAS recently appeared a book in which an attempt is made to trace the design of the modern conspiracy and throw light on the conspirators. It is called The New Unhappy Lords and if you have not heard of it the fault certainly does not lie with Candour! The book has been called "dangerous" by one newspaper and "pathetic" by another - adjectives which indicate that it has hit the mark. Nobody has attempted to answer its arguments or to controvert its facts, but it has encountered here and there one criticism which can be recognised as disinterested and honest. It is a criticism that has been levelled at Candour over and over again, and almost invariably it takes the form of a question. "Granted that what you write is true," say the questioners, "what do you propose to put in the place of the mis-government which you so rightly castigate?"

I have said that such criticism is disinterested and honest, but that does not make it valid. I have used so often the analogies of the house on fire and the ship being steered upon the rocks that I find it necessary to find a new one - and here it is. To ask us, in the present chaos of the times, to put forward a plan for the world's reconstruction is very much as though one were to find a man bound hand and foot and bleeding, and say to him: "Before I cut the cords and set you free I want to know precisely what you propose to do with your freedom."

The answer to our critics, therefore, is that we can construct only when we are free. To be free we must be sovereign. That is why the retaining of the sovereignty now threatened and the regaining of the sovereignty that has been lost form the basic principle upon which our case is based. National sovereignty is the only possible alternative to a putrescent Cosmopolis and the only safeguard against our ultimate enslavement.

De jure, we are still a sovereign nation, de facto there is today no sovereign nation on earth. Our rulers pose before the television cameras as men of destiny: out of sight of the cameras they crawl on their bellies to the moneylenders, and the more inextricably they can enmesh the nation in a web of unpayable international debt the greater does The Times newspaper hold their triumph to be.

No Panacea

WHAT OUR critics really want is that we should produce a nostrum - if not their own, then one with which they can quarrel. This is too facile by half. It is easy to go through the motions of plotting a course to the millenium, but it is not an exercise in realism. Those who engage in it, while honest and sincere are escapists. The sad truth is that there is no panacea. To hold the contrary view, to believe that this or that political or economic theory is the magic formula which will right the world's ills, is to take the struggle out of the sweat and grime of old earth and turn it into an intellectual game played in the sheltered cloisters of Cloudeuckooland.

We members of the League of Empire Loyalists are no pedlars of panaceas, no traffickers in easy comfort. Even to establish the first essential of our programme - the return of true national sovereignty - entails a long and terrible battle against the forces of evil intent upon smashing it down and herding us into their malodorous One World prison.

If these forces wore the uniform of the Devil we could the more easily grapple with them. Instead, they often operate behind a mask of benignity and their masquerade seems always to make an irresistible appeal to idealists who are more readily beguiled by words than by facts. It is no child's play to rescue mankind from the fog into which it has been led by the ruthless exploitation of its kindest instincts. Even though men know, for instance, the difference between black and white, they are made to feel a kind of guilt in the possession of that knowledge. "Racial discrimination" which throughout Nature is a clean and wholesome thing is depicted as something abominable, and cowards in their millions shy away from it, afraid of what they fear will be the immediate social consequences and thereby ensuring that the ultimate social consequences will be laden with all the human pathos and misery of miscegenation.

This is only one field in which to uphold a truth is to engage in battle. There are hundreds of others, all contrived by the conspirators through mechanisms of their own contriving - the so-called United Nations, the so-called Afro-Asian bloc, Nato, Seato, the European Common Market, the whole internationalist bag of tricks. The tremendous problem, which no simple formula can solve, is how to free men's minds from the fictions by which these devices for centralised control and ultimate enslavement are being sustained.

Essential Steps

FIRST OF all, obviously, the truth has to be made known. When sufficient awareness is aroused, the next step is to seek insulation as the prerequisite for the rebuilding of a decent social order. This means opting out of all internationalist organisations which deprive us of our sovereignty. If we opt out, we must be prepared for the internationalists to apply every kind of sanction against us. In as far as we are not economically self-contained we shall be vulnerable. Since Great Britain cannot be economically self-contained it is clear that she must enter into, or rather build upon, complementary economies. If she does not do this, if she is dragged into the European Common Market, she will be united with a competitive economy, witness the lowering of all her standards and lose the last remnants of her sovereignty.

Where can she look for a system of complementary economies? It is already there - in the British Empire. I repeat the words "British Empire". Let us cast away the absurd belief that there is such a thing as the British Commonwealth. It is something without reality, without meaning - not only a snare and a delusion but an obscene farce. Even the pretence of an affinity with Nkrumah's Ghana, with Kenyatta's Kenya, with Kaunda's Zambia, with any other of these squalid little despotisms masquerading as "emergent nations" is enough to make any self-respecting Briton shudder.

But there is a British Empire - an Empire with real community of interests. The Canadians fear the influx of Wall-Street capital and the extension of Wall-Street control. The Australians and New Zealanders surrender to Washington only because they despair of their own Mother Country. Rhodesia and the Republic of South Africa are in desperate need of the backing of a strong industrial power. Although South Africa has opted out of the British Empire she cannot opt out of her community of interests with the British world. Here then is the true "third force". Whether or not it entertained that larger ambition it could guarantee the national sovereignty of each and every one of its constituent nations. We should be able to trade with the world without being blackmailed by the world.

WHAT IS THE ALTERNATIVE?

THE DIFFICULTY in the way of recreating this Imperial system is enormous, entailing the repudiation of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and consigning to hell of the United Nations. What is the alternative? It is to renounce the hope of an independent existence, to render up our country to all comers, to see Australia and New Zealand or see Australia and New Zealand submerged by the opening of the Asiatic flood-gates, to acquiesce in the final triumph of the African jungle over the civilisation which our own disastrous rulers have betrayed. It is to say goodbye to quality and be dragooned in mindless mobs. These are the prospects which confront the British peoples not in some remote future but in the here and now. The infiltration of our minds, the debasement of our institutions, the battering upon the inmost pride of our nationhood, upon the citadels of our own manhood and womanhood, have not only begun but are far developed.

In what other age would a British Government, while browbeating a British Prime Minister from overseas, have allowed the United States of America and Western Germany to barge in and add their own pressures, here in the heart of the British Empire? That Harold Wilson suffered this to happen during his talks with Ian Smith proves that both the British Government and the American and German Governments, which are totally without interest in the matter, are all three the stooges of the anti-British, anti-White and anti-Christian conspiracy which has its headquarters in New York. In what other age would a British government have threatened to treat us as criminals for daring to stand by our own Rhodesian kinsmen and in what other age would Britons have been so brain washed as tamely to submit?

If we can make the truth of what is bedevilling the world widely enough known, that will be a tremendous achievement for one organisation. If we can then persuade the peoples of the British Empire to take the steps necessary to insulate themselves, by making themselves economically and politically invulnerable to the internationalist attack, that will be an achievement verging on the miraculous. If we can persuade the British nations and their natural allies to shake off the alien yoke and be masters in their own houses, that will be service enough to posterity. It will also be the keeping of faith with our warrior dead.

Cowardly Escapism

LOOKING REALISTICALLY at a task of such appalling magnitude, can we not be forgiven if we show some impatience when we are asked what we propose to do when the rot has been stopped and the battle won? We know by example what is expected of us - to abandon the fight against the enemy and become immersed in a series of drawing-room coteries to discuss this or that panacea, to decorate and furnish the millenium even while confusion and chaos engulf the world. The simple answer is that we will not do it.

The odds against us are terrifying enough, without the dissipation of our energies in discussions which will remain futile until, if ever, we are free to act. To succumb to that temptation, I repeat is escapism - and, what is more, it is cowardly escapism. How easy it is to imagine that one is fighting a war when all one is doing is repeating a pet formula in an atmosphere far removed from the murk and moil of battle!

Our own organisation, while it is still relatively small, has two advantages. Firstly, it has wings or groups in every British country, together with autonomous and vigorous offshoots such as the Candour League of South Africa and the Candour League of Rhodesia. Secondly, it has been in existence for twelve years without losing from the inner core of its leadership one single member. In a cause which has no material rewards to offer, and much ignorant mockery and smearing to endure, this solidarity is a triumphant proof of dedication, continuity of purpose and unbreakable will-power. Such association through the years, with all the inevitable ups and downs, hopes and disappointments, is possible only to fully adult people. Those motivated by personal ambition or obsessive thinking are incapable of regulating their relationship in this way. We have watched groups which have broken away from us not only fragment, but fragment over and over again, coming together in a bewildering variety of combinations and using a comic variety of names for their ephemeral little coteries. Some of them, since removing themselves from our discipline, have not only made fools of themselves but become a positive menace to the patriotic cause.

Name Remains

OUR OWN name remains. We are the League of Empire Loyalists and that name we shall preserve because it connotes our special purpose and because the League is in fact Empire wide. As the inner core of our leadership and of the main body of our supporters at home, though sometimes battle-weary, remains loyal and constant, so have our colleagues overseas remained loyal and constant. When the millions of people now brainwashed awake to the fact that their own future is placed in peril, they will find throughout the world a standard round which they can rally, and an organisation able to give them unity and leadership.

Because we use the word "Empire", ignorant critics like to dismiss us as cranks, fanatic, Kiplingesque survivals from the Victorian past. In truth we are the only body alive to the realities, to the grim realities, of the mid-Twentieth Century. We are the only body which takes into practical account the all-too-real existence of the Dollar Empire and of the Red Empire, and of the great subterranean conspiracy which links them together. We are the only body which works for the recreation of the benevolent British Empire, stream-lined in form and purged of corruption, as the one certain structure which can and must prevent the British peoples from being bulldozed out of history. Let the timid, the lazy, the selfish and the despondent crawl from the battle line. We, the dedicated, bid the Satanic forces to do their worst. We, the dedicated, stand firm. If we lose all else in the struggle, including our lives, we shall be able to look our ancestors squarely in the face. We shall have retained our honour.

Though the vast artillery of Hell be let loose upon us, our cry this year, as in every year until this momentous issue be decided, must be:

"FORWARD INTO BATTLE"

AND THAT GOES FOR US TOO ! R de B.

Candour Library Appeal Target 500

Our last library appeal was a smashing success, raising more than 1,000. We also asked you to donate books, magazines and pamphlets and here we have rather been the victims of our own success! Several collections have been donated or bequeathed, amounting to several thousand items, and already the substantial new shelf fittings are obscured by piles of books. The library has simply outgrown the original room and now we must expand into another. Again this involves renovating, decorating and the fitting of more shelving units.

One Candour stalwart who has already been extremely generous in the past has handcrafted and recently personally delivered a very large, beautiful, free-standing bookcase.

We are again asking all Candour readers and subscribers to further this work with your usual generous financial assistance. We need to have the research facilities so that our people can study, in many cases rare or unique, material in pleasant surroundings.

COMRADES IN POLAND UNDER ATTACK!

The Communist government in Poland is frightened by the growing success of the ITP's Polish affiliate, the NOP (National Revival of Poland) and has unleashed a repression on our Polish Comrades the like of which has not been seen for a long time in Nationalist circles.

The Red Government's unease has been growing since it took power. The NOP has a highly successful monthly 32 page magazine - Szczerbiec - which is distributed in all the main shops throughout Poland. It recently also launched a bi-weekly 'newspaper' which has taken the country by storm !

The NOP's successes have not been confined to the production and distribution of propaganda however. The movement holds regular demonstrations (such as the vigil outside the Romanian embassy in Warsaw on the 30th of November last year to remember the brutal murder of Codreanu and the Legionary elite by the democrats in King Carol's Romania of 1938) and marches throughout Poland to rally the National Revolutionary activists against the forces of evil which seek to subdue the Polish people. Just before the repression began in April, of this year, the NOP held a very successful mass demonstration in Warsaw. This followed a highly publicised small demonstration in Auschwitz by another, small, nationalist group. However, the media totally ignored the mass rally, the 'powers-that-be' clearly did not, and trouble soon started for the NOP in different areas !

In the town of Minsk-Mazowietki, a candidate for membership was hanged by anarchists. Then in the city of Lodz a leading activist was attacked by a drugs gang and had his nose cut off. That, however, was not enough for the criminal low lifes and while he was in hospital they kidnapped and raped his girlfriend. Soon afterwards four comrades - including the one disfigured- were arrested by the Communist police for "attempted murder" - i.e. for organising a reprisal attack. This is something that they are not guilty of ! At the same time the drugs gang members are under police protection ! Whilst the physical attacks continue the Communist state is also trying to silence Szczerbiec because of some revisionist articles it has carried.

The most recent attack has been the firebombing of the home of a leading NOP activist in Warsaw.

We are now witnessing an attack on our comrades in Poland by a united front. The Communist state with its police henchmen and the dregs of humanity in the form of anarchist and drug gangs. We, outside Poland (wherever we are !) must now rally to help our Polish comrades. Already in London Third Position activists, together with Polish (NOP) and Italian comrades resident in London have picketed the Polish Embassy several times. The NOP Solidarity Campaign has been launched by English and Flemish comrades to raise funds for the NOP. Please support it by sending £2 ($5 from USA) for an information pack to one of the addresses below.

NOP Solidarity Campaign at: BCM ITP, London, WC1N 3XX, England, or: BP7, B-1750, Lennik, Vlaanderen, Belgium. Cheques sent to the English address should be in British Pounds only and made payable to "Iron Guard". Cheques sent to the Flemish address should be in Belgian Francs only and made payable to "Vercruysse D.". All profits will be sent on to the NOP to help with their running costs, legal expenses, etc.

PORTUGAL and the Nationalist Movement - by Joao Martins

This year Portugal celebrates the 22nd anniversary of the 'coup d'etat' that ended the oldest European Dictatorship and it's Colonial Empire in Africa, provoking an exodus of over 1 million Portuguese.

At the present time parliamentary democracy is consolidated and on 1 October, 1995, Portugal 'turned left' with the Socialist Party's victory at the legislative elections. This spelt defeat for the Social Democrat Party that had governed the country during the previous 10 years.

One of the first measures taken by the new government was to give amnesty to terrorists from a left wing organisation called Popular Forces 25th April (Forças Populares 25 De Abril - FP's 25) who incited terror among the people in the 1980's.

This amnesty met with revulsion and disgust amongst a people upon whose memories is indelibly etched the images of the terrorists' bombs.

Meanwhile in jails, other prisoners started a strike movement because they felt discriminated against for not being included in the amnesty. The culmination of this was riots between prisoners and their guards.

Portugal is a country of countless problems, beginning with the structural malaise and decay suffered during 48 years of Dictatorship with its 'proudly alone' politics*, passed down through the failures of the democrats, and ending with its geographical position that makes it an open door to immigration from Africa. Nowadays Portugal has 500,000 official immigrants in addition to those already naturalised and the obligatory illegal variety.

Like other European countries Portugal has a variety of social problems: drugs pour in from North Africa, unemployment continues to climb, and positive discrimination, encouraged by the government, has caused uncountable social conflicts.

In spite, and perhaps because of, the constitution being very clear and stiff concerning the prohibition of Racist, Fascist or paramilitary organisations, the fact is that in recent years many nationalist organisations have appeared.

The National Action Movement (MAN), founded in 1985, has been the biggest and best organised of the nationalist groups. It has its own newspaper Offensive (Ofensiva) but it was declared illegal some years ago. Meanwhile, the skinhead led, and therefore illegal, National Defense Front (FDN) published some good propaganda and a magazine called Final Solution (Solucao Final) before dissolving itself.

Several nationalists joined the European Synergy project and were able to publish an excellent magazine but only 3 issues were produced, displaying once more the difficulties that exist within the so-called movement.

In 1994 an organisation called Nationalist Foundational Action (AFN) was created. The purpose of the AFN was to be an embryonic Portuguese Nationalist Party but this organisation has already suffered a major set-back due to a schism caused by elements nostalgic for the old regime. Like a Portuguese nationalist said: "In Portugal, where there are two nationalists, there is a schism". Another development in 1994 was the appearance of the Reality (Realidade) magazine but this pro-nationalist, skinhead-connected, publication has failed to appear recently.

The very latest political developments in Portugal seem to be more encouraging. Older elements of the National Action Movement (MAN) and present publishers of NOW (Agora) newspaper (national-Christian in character) have come forth with the project of a new party called National Alliance (Aliancia Nacional) similar to the National Alliance (Alleanze Nazionale) in Italy. At the present time its purpose is to succeed in acquiring enough strength to run in the 1999 legislative elections. Only time will tell if this will be another failed project or whether we in Portugal will at last have a credible movement that national revolutionaries can identify with.

It is possible the new nationalist party may come to nothing. If this happens the parties in power will become more and more removed, both from history, and from the battles that life will reserve for us in the future.

Youth was, and always will be, the one and only historical motor and being careless with this truth is to mortgage the nationalist movement, the country, and the people's future.

The mission of all true Portuguese during the last 22 years, was, and is, preventing this from happening. The victory will not be easy but the future belongs to us.

(* A future Candour issue will include a summary of the Salazar regime showing that "malaise and decay" followed the great dictator's death. Ed)

Activists for Romania and Christ !

In January 1990, the students in Timisoura, who published a University newspaper, called Forum Studentesc, were so affected by - in their own words - "the tumultuous days of Timisoura's December '89 Revolution" that they re-shaped their newspaper and on "the third day of Christmas, 1989, (only two days after Ceausescu was shot) in that hot December, we edited the first private issue of Forum, changed its name to Gazeta de Vest and appeared on January 23rd, 1990...." It was an outlaw magazine, as there was no law. From the beginning, their concern was the necessity of Romanian youth to fight for justice and the right as opposed to wrong. Because, as they said, the society in which they had been raised was a communist one, in which all the values had been reversed, so that they had to re-learn almost everything and that was a selection process with obvious consequences as "most of our initial friends (who were working with us) proved themselves to be too weak or too rotten to engage in the fight against the evil forces. After we encountered the Legion the splits began and other "earthquakes" which left their mark on Gazeta de Vest's distribution (from 100,000 to 2,500 copies now).

Starting from 1991, GV's aims and ideals are following those of the Legion of St. Michael the Archangel." The forgoing was part of an interview the Romanian activists who produce Gazeta de Vest had with the Third Positionists who produce Final Conflict. F.C. "Can you explain the events after the revolt against Communism in 1989 ? Many in the West think that the revolts across Central and Eastern Europe were orchestrated by the KGB to change the image but not the identities of the overlords."

G de V. "You are right. The role of the KGB is obvious. Although their plans have succeeded and nothing's actually changed, there occurred the unexpected: the riots in Timisoara started with "Jos Ceausescu !" (Down with Ceausescu !) and metamorphosed in a few short hours to "Jos Comunismul !" (Down with Communism!). The Nation, first in Timisoara, then in Bucharest, Sibiu, Cluj and so on, rose against Communism and not to replace one tyrant with another. At that point the situation escaped from the control of the KGB. There is no secret service on this planet capable of resisting a Nation's desire for freedom. Unfortunately, the Legion had no structure operative in Romania in 1989-90. Because the alternative was missing (the democratic opposition is something like nothing !) the Romanian Nation could not profit from the moment. After the 15th of June 1990, the Communist forces struck back with all their hatred and cruelty (for example, the enraged coal miners' riots of Bucharest). We know these are the same overlords, we feel it all the time. And we know that the image is getting closer to the one before 1989 and not just in the East, but also in the West."

An English Edition of Gazeta de Vest is now published monthly ! A 6 issue subscription is available by sending payment for £ 7.50 (£ 10 Europe - £ 15 elsewhere) made payable to 'TPFF' at: BCM ITP, London, WC1N 3XX, England.

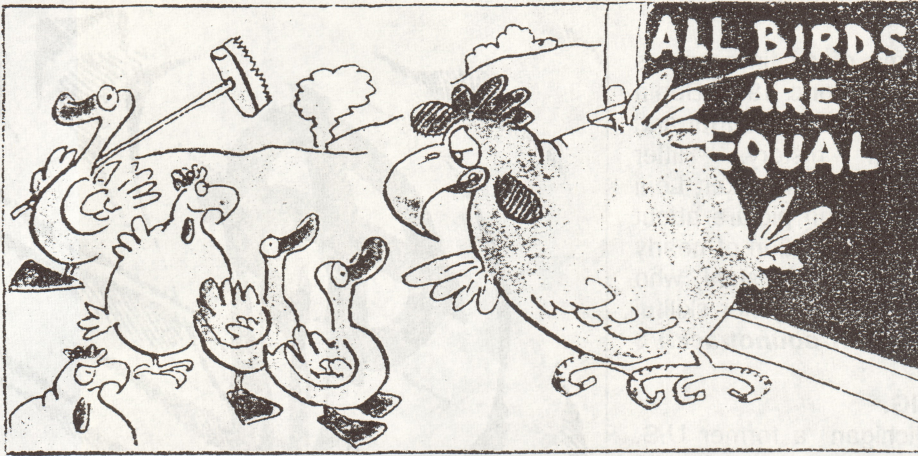

A Fighting Father !

Father Gerald Dunn of the Columban Fathers is a doughty fighter in the cause of true Christianity - the Catholic Faith - and its right application in the conduct of education and politics - and if we intend to be among the "chosen" few at the end of time, we could not do better than lend an ear to Father Gerald's latest disertation, recorded on cassette tape, on God's plan for the ultimate redemption of the World from the dominion of Satan and the final salvation of all those who have heard the word of God and abide by it.

The Redemption, he says, which is as all else, in the mind of God from all eternity, , which within Time, began with the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin promised at the banishment from Eden of the first human victims of the temptation of the serpent (Satan). God promised that He would send a woman who would crush the serpent's head beneath her foot. That woman is the Immaculate Virgin Mary who agreed to accept, and co-operate in the Divine Plan, revealed by the angel Gabriel, for the redemption of mankind, whose unrepented sins made them incapable of saving themselves from damnation. Thus, she was "overshadowed" by the Holy Spirit - the spirit of mutual love, the Third Person of the triune God - and conceived, without sin, the human manifestation of the Word of God Jesus the Christ.

Because Mary, the Virgin Mother of the Incarnate God, bore, nurtured, directed and suffered with her Son from His birth to his crucifixion and burial, God raised her to the highest place of all created beings: she is God's ultimate masterpiece, endowed with an Immaculate Heart to match the Sacred Heart of her Son, to join with Him in bringing about the conversion and salvation of souls by the power of their overwhelming love. Says Father Gerald: without the intercession of the Immaculate Heart of Mary we cannot hope to triumph over the Satanic con-trickster who seeks to destroy God's human creation. Hear the Father trace the trend from Eden to "these end times". You will be imbued with the same will and vigour for victory in the immanent final conflict as echoes in Fr Dunn's inspiring tape.

The Fable of the Ducks and the Hens

MEDIA CONCEPT is proud to present its first title intended especially - but not solely - for children. The very young who have 'The Ducks and the Hens' read to them will find it a visually captivating, easy to understand story in verse about a struggle between "goodies" and "baddies".

Older children who come - or return - to the fable will discover all sorts of concepts or situations which, in other forms, will challenge them in later life and which confront adult society today, not least: is it certain that the righteous will triumph in the end, or are life's prizes reserved for ruthless conspiratorial predators?

The reader's enjoyment is enhanced by enchanting full-colour illustrations - 42 in all - which capture with poignancy and wit every incident as the saga unfolds.

This (at first glance) simple story will reveal, at each re-reading, further layers of meaning to those whose minds have not been conditioned by the 'politically correct' outpourings of the current education system and mass media.

For years nationalists have complained that little or no effort has been made to counter the juggernaut of multi-racial pap that is fed to children day in and day out, now that a start has been made, and a very professional one at that, we are sure you will all support and encourage this initiative.

We have a large stock of this beautifully produced, 28 page, A4 size publication ready for immediate despatch. Send your cheque or Postal Order today, for £5.50 U.K. (£6 Overseas or a U.S. $10 bill), payable to the A.K. Chesterton Trust, Forest House, Liss Forest, Hampshire, England, GU33 7DD.

BOOK REVIEW

IDEOLOGY OF OBSESSION: A.K. CHESTERTON AND BRITISH FASCISM by David Baker.

(Published 1996 by Tauris Academic Studies. ISBN 1 86064 073 7)

Back in the seventies, Dr David Baker, now Senior Lecturer in Politics at Nottingham Trent University, obtained his doctoral status from that same University with his "viva voce" on A.K. Chesterton M.C., and then, on the advice of Professor Robert Skidelsky (biographer of Mosley and Keynes), extended it into a full blown biography over a period (on and off one supposes) of twenty odd years. The result has now been published by Taurus Academic Studies under the title: Ideology of Obsession.

Our readers will not be surprised to learn that Dr Baker is a liberal-minded academic since the "broad, sunlit uplands" in the publishing world are definitely "out of bounds" for less indoctrinated investigators. However, since he has earned from Professor Richard C. Thurlow the accolade that Dr Baker's is "a major contribution to our understanding of the nature of fascism, and why people become fascists"; you may wonder what is our interest in such an analysis which makes absolutely no contribution to our understanding of the "nature of fascism" or why people adopt it; the reason is that Dr Baker, unlike most writers on the subject does not allow his "liberal prejudices" to twist the facts of A.K.C.'s life to fit the condemnation of the "politically correct" version of fascism and its persistent survival in the face of all the odds. It is obvious that to the author's surprise he found that he liked the man his "homework" uncovered from interviews with and material obtained on loan from Mrs Doris Chesterton, A.K.'s widow; the erstwhile Candour staff and its present editor; he therefore produced a recognisable portrait of him as a person his friends and followers will recognise if they discount "the ideology" as being the "obsession"; A.K.'s obsession was his love of England, his native land, and her role in history, and his determination to do all in his power to save her from oblivion. We, who have the same "obsession", are not so rich in published information on any of our heroes that we want to ignore this advertisement of one of the most recent and the greatest known in the lifetime of anyone under fifty when it could provide a side entrance, so to speak, to enlightening, historical information as yet unknown to later generations with the temperament to follow where he has led.

(Please note that this book is NOT available from Candour and because of the daunting price, £35, we suggest that you contact your local library and provide them with the ISBN number, see above, when asking if they can obtain a copy of the book for you.)

Freedom Videos

OLYMPIA 1936.

This is one of the most famous films of all time and is Germany's cinematic pageant of the historic 1936 Berlin Olympics. The Games were one of the most colourful and competitively-balanced Olympics in history. Hitler commissioned Germany's most renowned film maker, Leni Riefenstahl, to create a monumental motion picture about the event. The resulting epic was the culmination of nearly two years of painstaking work by Miss Riefenstahl, who personally edited a million feet of film, shot by her skillful crew of a hundred cameramen. (English soundtrack.) 3 Hours 15 Minutes. B/W.

AMERICA IN PERIL + CARL KLANG.

Mark Koerneke, "The Man From Michigan" a former U.S. Army intelligence analyst explains the threatened hostile take-over of the United States by the United Nations military forces. Recorded shortly before the Oklahoma bombing this video puts many of the events that have since taken place into perspective. Mark presents the hard, brutal and often seemingly unbelievable facts in an informed and articulate way. This video tape concludes with an excellent studio recorded session by Carl Klang, the American patriotic musician and singer. Includes hits: "Hang Um High" and "It's Coming Down (The New World Order)".

BOOKS FROM FOREST HOUSE

THE NEW UNHAPPY LORDS by A.K. Chesterton.

As ever more people emerge from the prolonged state of lethargy which followed the war (WW II) to find the old familiar world destroyed, the once cherished values scorned, the signposts to what had seemed an assured national future obliterated, they ask in bewilderment: "What is behind it all?". Jolted into an awareness of mysterious forces at work causing universal confusion and chaos, their next question swiftly follows: "Who is behind it all?".

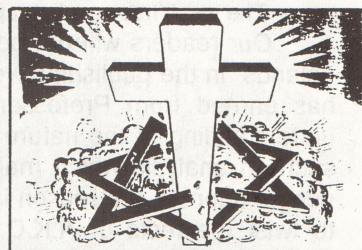

The New Unhappy Lords endeavours to answer both questions, revealing much of the secret history of our times and exposing the conspiracy which shapes that history and continues to dragoon mankind into a One World dictatorship.
